INTRODUCTION

The QADIS survey project is a joint initiative of the Alma Mater Studiorum - University of Bologna and the State Board of Antiquities and Heritage (SBAH). The findings presented here were analyzed in the frame of the EU funded project "EDUU - Educational and Cultural Heritage Enhancement for Social Cohesion in Iraq" (EuropeAid CSO-LA/2016/382-631).

The first, second and third field seasons took place in January and October 2016 and in January 2017 respectively. We report here on the general survey activities of the first two seasons, providing detailed information on 40 sites newly identified in addition to Adams 1981. The survey area (Fig. 1) follows the administrative borders of the region of Qadisiyah to the South and East (including part of the Delmej basin), and it stops around the town of Afak to the North-West.¹

Key words : settlement , survey , qadis .

In our area, previous surface surveys have been carried out in 1902 in the Fara environs (Andrae 1903), in 1925-1926 and in 1968 in an area larger than our own (Dougherty 1926; Al-Shukri 1974), while between 1968 and 1975 Adams' survey developed on the ground (Adams 1981; the southern fringe of the QADIS area is covered by Adams and Nissen 1972). As for the excavations, between 1903 and 1905 Adab was extensively excavated (Wilson 2012), while in 1977 a single season was carried out at Umm al-Hafriyat (Gibson 1977/78). After both the 2nd and 3rd Gulf Wars, in extremely difficult conditions for the management and preservation of the archaeological heritage (see especially Emberling and Hanson 2008 on the looting peak which occurred between 2003 and 2007), the State Board of Antiquities and Heritage (SBAH) carried out several regular or emergency excavations at the sites of Tell Dhuhaiya, Bismaya/Adab (Al-Doori et al. 2001-2002), Tell Mirza, Tell Ruejeh and Tell Delmej 1-2 in the Delmej Basin, Tell al-Akhader, Tell Abu Edan, Tell el-'Arris (along the Afak-Al Budayr road) and Tell Drehem/Puzrish-Dagan (Al-Mutawalli and Shalkham 2014).

The main aims of the QADIS project are to produce a new understanding of a multi-layered archaeological landscape through cutting-edge documentation techniques, to plot – with the greatest possible detail – urban plans from visible surface remains coupled with their fine chronological attribution through systematic collections of surface materials (which also define the functional interpretation of the urban sectors), to connect epigraphic sources with settlement patterns, to map the landscape of silted channels also studying its historical development and, in general, to check and update the bulk of Adams' seminal results through an integrated survey methodology (Marchetti et al. in press a; in press b).

RESULTS OF THE 2016-2017 SURVEY SEASONS

The 2016-2017 campaigns focused on a large area extending from Tell Drehem and the Delmej reservoir to the N-NW until Bismaya/Adab and Tell Jidr/Karkar to the SE (Fig. 1) (Marchetti et al. in press a; in press b).²

DISCUSSIONS AND CONCLUSIONS

The new data collected during the 2016 and 2017 campaigns of the QADIS survey project indicate a higher settlement density especially as far as the late 3rd - early 2nd millennium BC and the Parthian-Sasanian periods are concerned (Fig. 2). Most of the sites exposed are very small, flat and often very difficult to identify without the support of satellite imagery. Moreover, many of them are severely damaged by modern crop or looting. Along with the new sites exposed, remote sensing analysis using aerial photographs and satellite imagery, allowed to identify a more complex hydraulic landscape system and probably a substantial waterway hierarchy. Researches on this subject are still ongoing and the results will be published in the near future.
