Abstract: The advent of the 'permacrisis' has ushered in a new normality wherein governments are compelled to intervene in the economy to sustain growth. The convergence of challenges such as the clean and just transition, the Covid-19 pandemic, geopolitical tensions, and soaring energy prices has led many governments to grant subsidies to enterprises. These subsidies are used to either 'save' ailing undertakings or secure the production of strategic goods and technologies on their soil. Critics argue that the existing remedies within the WTO framework are insufficient to counteract the protectionist repercussions of subsidization, or the policies of 'State capitalist economies'. In response to this issue, the EU has introduced a novel autonomous instrument, Regulation (EU) 2022/2560 on foreign subsidies that distort the internal market (FSR).

After providing an overview of the issue of foreign subsidies and the current WTO framework, the seminar delves into the FSR and other EU instruments designed to counter them. The different interests at stakes – from ensuring a level playing field to empowering States to answer crises and drive change – will be discussed, alongside how EU law try to balance them. Ultimately, the audience is encouraged to assess the effectiveness and coherence of the EU's approach towards subsidization. How can the EU mitigate the risk of a global subsidy race? Does the FSR present a paradigm shift in addressing the subsidy issue effectively?

SustainEUorPlanet: The Project proposes an interdisciplinary and critical analysis of the EU's international policies and legal frameworks directed to economic and social fairness, respect for the environment, access to clean energy and essential goods, while looking for security to overcome geopolitical tensions and asymmetries. SustainEUorPlanet has a twofold purpose. On one side, it offers a set of activities envisaging the promotion of a ruling and academic class of excellence, involving EU, national and international civil servants, politicians, NGOs, local businesses and public administration. On the other side, SustainEUorPlanet shows the leading role of the EU as a global actor in constantly promoting a sustainable agenda for trade, environment, energy and climate policies, highlighting the importance of economic operators' accountability and the relevance that EU citizens can have in shaping and enforcing EU's external tools through participation and transparency. Likewise, the Project focuses on political security policies in world economy. More information available on the Project's website and on LinkedIn.
